These are books every writer, and just about everyone else, should have on the shelf.
Her eyes were her best feature, a bewitching shade of greeny-gray and uptilted a bit at the corners. Two of them have exceptionally fantastic endings, two of them create a phenomenal atmosphere, one of them really freaked me out and one was really more lost and sad than scary but I liked it just as .
But whatever the length, The Bazaar of Bad Dreams seems more by Stephen King. If you're going to read a single suspenser in make it this one.
