students of development studies and those involved in determining development policy. Global issues such as climate change, security, migration or global health are key topics in both the DS and IS fields.

Today, a large number of scholars studying development understand this process
The contributions develop wide-ranging themes and concepts: agrarian structures and agro-ecological regions, labour and markets, caste and gender, consumption, urban governance and access to urban space, the dynamics of knowledge production and of political mobilization. An important ongoing debate on DS relates to the necessity of decolonising knowledge and giving space to African indigenous knowledge.

This volume aims at taking stock of the effect on North-South relations since the book opens the door to critical approaches within development and European studies that question the very meaning of emulating aid policies of the EU experienced donors as well as the relevance of the 'emerging' or 're-emerging' donors in the international development arena.
