Manual

Flappers were a generation of young Western women in the 1920s who wore short skirts, bobbed hair, and wore heavy makeup. The term possibly originated in slang, but there is no direct evidence of that. The word was popular enough for A. E. James to begin a series of stories in the 1920s. The stories focused on the struggle for women's full political participation, economic independence, and 'sex rights'.
